Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly President

TO BE INSTALLED NEXT MONDAY

MR. SEAN T. O'KELLY is the new President of Ireland. When Dr. P. McCartan's second preference votes were distributed yesterday the totals of the remaining candidates were:

Mr. O'Kelly 565,165

General S. Mac Eoin 453,425

The quota was 543,170.

Of Dr. McCartan's second preferences, 27,200 went to Mr. O'Kelly and 117,886 to General Mac Eoin, while 67,748 were non-transferable.

Last night Mr. O'Kelly was officially notified of his election, and he will be installed as President on Monday next.

The positions of the three presidential candidates after the first count were as follows:—

Mr. O'Kelly	537,965
General MacEoin	335,539
Dr. McCartan	212,791

None of them having received the quota, Dr. McCartan was eliminated and his second preferences distributed. A remarkably high proportion of his supporters—31.3 per cent.—" plumped " for Dr. McCartan, so that their votes were non-transferable; 55.4 per cent. gave their second preferences to General MacEoin; and 12.7 per cent. gave theirs to Mr. O'Kelly. As Mr. O'Kelly needed only 2.5 per cent. for election, it was realised long before the end of the count that his success was certain.

The result was announced by Mr. Wilfrid Brown, Presidential Returning Officer, at 6.45 p.m., in the presence of General Sean MacEoin, two members of the Cabinet, the election agents of all the candidates, and a number of high-ranking Army officers.

The count began at 9.30 a.m., occupied 8½ hours, and was carried out by a staff of fifty men in the Phœnix Hall, Dame Court, Dublin.

Immediately the result was declared copies were taken by special Army couriers to the retiring President, Dr. Douglas Hyde; the President-elect, the Taoiseach, the Chief Justice, the Ceann Comhairle, the Chairman of the Senate, and the Secretary to the President, Mr. M. McDunphy.

Listening to the declaration of the result were two of Mr. O'Kelly's colleagues, Mr. Frank Aiken, Minister for the Co-Ordination of Defensive Measures, and Mr. G. Boland, Minister for Justice. After the speeches, at the request of Mr. Maguire, election agent for Dr. McCartan, three cheers were given for the new President.

Mr. John S. O'Connor, election agent for Mr. O'Kelly, in the course of an address, said that it was a great feat of organisation on Mr. Brown's part to have the poll and count carried out so smoothly and quickly on such a wide basis. It reflected credit also on all who helped.

CONGRATULATIONS

General MacEoin, congratulating Mr. O'Kelly on his election, said that personally he regarded him as a friend and a courteous gentleman, and wished him many years of life to fulfil the duties of his high office.

"It is now clear," he continued, "that Mr. O'Kelly was not my opponent in this election, but Eamon de Valera himself, with all the resources of State machinery to support him, together with the petty party bosses of Fianna Fail in city and country. It is to be regretted that Mr. de Valera intervened as a party leader, and so far forgot his high office as head of the Government as to make this election a matter of confidence in his external policy and the smashing of partition. One of his Ministers rightly described the introduction of partition as a confidence trick during the campaign; that is about the only correct thing stated by that Minister.

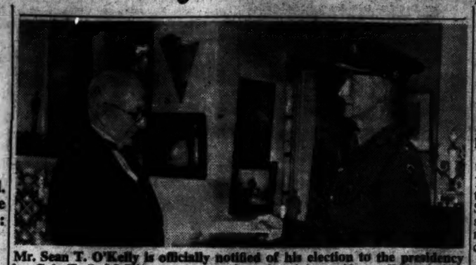
"I went into this contest without personal ambition, but with the desire to protect the people's rights. This has always been my objective. My opponents, as I say, were not only Mr. de Valera and his party by Mr. Churchill. This was an army just as great as that faced by my comrades and myself at any period of my career; and if we have not achieved victory, we have not suffered defeat.

"In 1921 if I had been buried in Mountjoy, Bodenstown or Ballinalee, I presume I would now be one of the uncanonised saints of the Fianna Fail calendar, and even the irresponsible Minister for Local Government and Public Health would be doing honour at my shrine," said General MacEoin. "My friend Dr. McCartan fought a clean and honourable battle in this election. It is what I expected from him, and I thank him.

"May I conclude, as I began, by praying that God may bless the work of the new President."

Mr. T. Maguire, solicitor, said that, as election agent for Dr. McCartan, he should like to associate himself with what had been said about the efficient manner in which the count had been carried out. He should also wish to express his thanks to those who had supported Dr. McCartan. The Irish people were fortunate in having as candidates three men of the highest integrity, any one of whom would have made a most excellent President. The figures, in so far as they referred to Dr. McCartan, indicated that there was a large body of opinion in this country which felt that "State controllism" should not exist.

He thought that the result of the poll showed that the people felt that the Presidency should be something over and above and remote from party politics. It would be an unhappy thing if this election were to be regarded in the future as a precedent for this country. He felt, as he thought they all did, that the President of the country should be removed from party politics and should be regarded as the father of his people. However, now that Mr. O'Kelly was elected as their President, he hoped that he would receive the respect and loyalty of the Irish people.



Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly is officially notified of his election to the presidency by Col. T. J. McKinsey, representing the Army, who called at Mr. O'Kelly's home.

Liberals Ask Leopold To Abdicate

The Standing Committee of the Belgian Liberal Party last night, says Reuter, called on King Leopold to abdicate. In a resolution they said: "It has become useless to deny that the King's return to the country would be liable to create a situation entailing consequences which would be incalculably harmful for Belgium."

M. Van Acker, Belgian Premier, has made a new appeal to King Leopold to reconsider his decision to return to Belgium. Van Acker told Belgians, in a broadcast: "The Government considers it its duty to inform the King, as precisely as possible, of the different currents of opinion existing in Belgium, and to leave it to him to make the decision he considers best in the interests of the nation." He indicated that the King had not yet made a final decision.

A Reuter message received from Brussels early this morning stated that the feeling prevails in usually well-informed Belgian circles that King Leopold is reconsidering his decision to return. Political quarters calling for his abdication are disposing more optimism on the outbosses, but the Irish Press, assisted come of the crisis.

Prolonged Campaign in Pacific Indicated

FROM OUR MILITARY CORRESPONDENT.

THE announced decision of the Japanese Government to continue the war in the face of the Allied demand for unconditional surrender implies a relatively lengthy struggle requiring the maximum of Allied effort to bring it to a successful conclusion.

It is not within the realms of doubt that the Allies will be victorious in the end, provided that they pursue the issue with all their resources; what comes into question, however, is the method by which the victory may most rapidly be attained.

The near end of the struggle on Okinawa now permits of further Allied moves, and signs are not wanting that Admiral Halsey's Third Fleet is already on the move for further operations. The question which arises from this situation, however, is where exactly the next main American stroke will be directed.

The Japanese Government has already warned the population of the likelihood of an early Allied invasion of the Japanese mainland, and strenuous efforts are being made to prepare the country for defence. It is possible, however, that this warning may be as much propaganda for the purpose of stiffening Japanese morale as genuine belief. Before accepting such a conclusion certain factors must be considered.

With the exception of the Philippines, all Allied land operations so far have been directed against relatively small Japanese garrisons isolated from relief by superior Allied air and naval power. Even in the Philippines a somewhat similar situation was brought about by the landing of the largest Allied army yet to operate in the Far East, and the struggle there is by no means concluded, although no doubt remains as to the eventual decision. While this Allied army continued to be engaged, there appears little likelihood that there can be found, at the present stage, sufficient Allied forces to permit of a successful invasion of the Japanese islands.

It is always possible that the Americans will attempt to penetrate further towards the heart of Japan by the seizure of more islands close to the Japanese mainland, and, thus, to commence a policy of slow strangulation by combined air, naval and military action, continuously intensified as reinforcements arrive from Europe. This is, however, a slow process, depending entirely on the rate of transfer from Europe and one which would ignore the situation on the Asiatic mainland, where, in Manchuria, Korea and Northern China, the Japanese have an arsenal second only to that recently destroyed in Japan by the Allied air raids.

While it is obvious that the complete subjugation of Japan itself would destroy the whole Japanese military and political system, it is by no means clear that this would automatically bring about the end of Japanese resistance in the occupied territories. Indeed, the struggles still going on in New Guinea, Borneo and Burma rather suggest the opposite. If it is accepted that an invasion of Japan is one which would probably require time to mount there remain other possibilities capable of more rapid exploitation.

On the Asiatic mainland, in China, Manchuria and Korea, but especially in China, there exist forces which have been struggling against Japanese rule with varying success for a number of years.

The fall of Okinawa, which would ensure American naval domination of the Yellow Sea, would invite Allied contact with the Chinese forces now in the Foochow area of the coast. A penetration in this manner, having for its consequence the steady entry of Allied influence and arms into the Gulf of Chihli, lying at the strategic junction of Manchuria and China, would have immediate effects upon the whole Japanese military and political situation in this the most important industrial and political area of Eastern Asia. A further factor in determining such a line of approach would necessarily be the Allied viewpoint on the future of East Asia vis-à-vis that of the Soviet Union, whose intervention, direct or indirect, cannot long be delayed once the war reaches the areas of former Russian influence.

Removal of Air Raid Shelters Begins

The task of removing the air raid shelters from the streets of Dublin was begun yesterday when workers started demolishing two of them in Marlborough street. The work is being undertaken by the Dublin Corporation, which, it is understood, will shortly accept tenders from contractors for the removal of the entire 700 shelters in the city.

Churchill or Laski?

Mr. Richard Law, British Minister of Education, said at Hull yesterday that the electorate had to decide whether they wanted Mr. Winston Churchill to lead them or Professor Harold Laski, as the choice appears no longer to be between Mr. Churchill and Mr. Attlee.

U.S. ATTACK ON OKINAWA INTENSIFIED

U.S. MARINES have made new thrusts into the dwindling area of Southern Okinawa held by the Japanese, whose garrisons are still fighting fiercely, states Reuter's special correspondent, cabling from the U.S. Pacific Fleet Headquarters.

From the island's air bases the U.S. bombers, according to Admiral Nimitz's communiqué, continued their "neutralising" attacks on the Sakishima Island group, 175 miles south-west of Okinawa and 70 miles east of Formosa, off the east coast of China.

Admiral Nimitz also announced that, so far, 80,450 Japanese were killed and 1,080 taken prisoner.

Four big cities of the Japanese mainland—the Kyushu ports of Kagoshima and Omuta and the aircraft and textile cities of Hamamatsu and Yokkaichi, on the main island of Honshu—were still burning after Sunday's five-hour fire attack by 400 Super-Fortresses.

The Japanese News Agency yesterday stated that a number of U.S. submarines had "smuggled" themselves into Japan's own inland sea between the Japanese islands and the Korean-Siberian coast.

The Chinese High Command announced that yesterday their troops re-captured the important seaport of Wenchow, 220 miles south of Shanghai, states the Associated Press.

The Japanese fled from the southern bank of the Wu River, on which Wenchow stands, to the northern bank with Chinese troops in hot pursuit. Wenchow, a possible Allied "invasion port," is located on the bulging Chekiang coast of Central China.

General Arnold, Chief of the U.S.A.A.F., said yesterday: "The Air Force alone can completely wipe out Japan by the end of 1946—if the Japanese are capable of fighting until then." General Arnold stressed that U.S. Air Forces, with the help of the R.A.F., will be capable, six months from now, of dropping 2,100,000 tons of bombs on Japan yearly.

The British Admiralty is recruiting 15,000 workers in Italy for port and road construction in the Far East, under the agreement between the British and Italian Governments, the Italian Newsagency reported last night.—(Reuter.)

Eisenhower Pays Tribute to Churchill

AFTER his arrival in the United States yesterday, General Eisenhower addressed a joint session of Congress. He paid a warm tribute to the partnership of Mr. Churchill and the late President Roosevelt, "two God-given men who were my Commanders-in-Chief."

Continuing, he said: "To those two all of us recognise our lasting obligation.

"The Prime Minister's rugged determination, his fighting spirit and his singleness of purpose, were always the spur to action. Never once did he give less than full co-operation in any endeavour necessary to our military objectives, and never did he hesitate to use his magnetic and powerful personality to win his countrymen's cheerful acceptance of the great demands he was forced to make upon them.

"In critical moments Mr. Churchill did not hesitate to cut Britain's already reduced rations to provide more shipping for war purposes.

"For the hospitality the British offered us, for the discomforts they endured on our behalf, and the sacrifices they made for the success of operations, every American acquainted with the facts will always carry for them a warm and grateful place deep within his heart.

It was estimated that 20,000 to 30,000 people were at the Washington airport to greet Eisenhower when he landed. With the General were 53 fellow-soldiers — from privates to Generals — who had fought with him.

President Truman presented Eisenhower with the Oakleaf Cluster for "conspicuous service to the peoples of all the United Nations."

Sports Scheme is "Premature"

A Córas Iompair Eireann official in Dublin last night described as "premature" a report from our Cork correspondent that the company intended, as part of a national scheme applicable to the principal rail traffic centres, to allocate several thousand pounds for the erection in Cork of a sports ground, the provision of sports equipment and other recreational facilities for their employees. A preliminary meeting was held in Cork during the week-end, at which tentative plans were discussed, and the representatives of the various departments in Cork decided to place their views before the company's welfare officer.

MOSCOW TRIAL OPENS

Poles Plead Guilty To Sabotage Charges

AT the opening of the trial in Moscow yesterday of Major-General Okulicki, former commander of the Polish Home Army, and 15 other Poles, the prosecution alleged that all the accused had confessed to heading an illegal organisation on the instructions of the Polish Government.

It was asserted that Okulicki gave orders for slanderous and concocted information to be sent to the London Polish Government for transmission to the British Government, so as to misinform the British and obtain more active aid from them.

The trial opened in the brilliantly lit "October Hall" of the Moscow Trade Unions. Only 15 of the defendants appeared in court, one being absent because of illness.

The accused were charged with sabotage and terrorist acts against Red Army officers, the use of illegal radio transmitters, and spreading anti-Soviet propaganda. Okulicki is also charged with espionage.

All but one—Stypulkovsky, a member of the National Party Executive—pleaded "wholly or partly guilty." Okulicki said: "I am not guilty, but within the limits of what I have stated I am guilty."

Mr. F. K. Roberts, British Minister, was present with an interpreter and an American Embassy official.

The prisoners sat in the dock heavily guarded by men with fixed bayonets. Film cameras "shot" the scene. Judging from the number of documents brought into court the case may go on for some time.

CONFESSIONS

The act of accusation, read by the Attorney for the prosecution, stated that Okulicki and others had confessed to heading an underground government inside Poland, operating on instructions from the Polish Government in London. Okulicki, it said, was instructed by the London Poles to dissolve the Armija Ikrajowa (Polish Home Army), but to retain a nucleus of the best officers, some arms and radio transmitters, to keep up sabotage and propaganda against the Red Army and the Soviet Union.

The prosecution said that Okulicki was the deputy of General Bor-Komarowski, who was captured by the Germans after the Warsaw revolt last year.

Okulicki, it was stated, headed an illegal terrorist organisation which, between July 28th, 1944, and May 31st, 1945, killed 594 Red Army officers and men and wounded 249 others.

Okulicki and others were accused of spreading terrorism with a new illegal organisation formed on the instructions of the Polish Government in London and extending over Poland, Western Ukraine and Western White Russia, and in various places in the rear of the Red Army.

It was stated that there was a special school from which 200 trained saboteurs graduated.

Okulicki was further alleged to have confessed that he had formed an underground organisation in Lithuania.

According to the prosecution, all the accused had confessed to being guilty of heading an illegal organisation on the instructions of the London Government.

SECRET RADIOS

Between August, 1944, and May, 1945, in Poland, the Western Ukraine and White Russia, and in Lithuania, the Russians discovered 25 secret radio stations with codes and messages. They arrested the radio operators and technicians, who revealed the instructions received from, and the messages sent to, the Polish Government in London.

The Prosecuting Attorney continued: "Okulicki has confessed that he planned a Polish-German anti-Soviet bloc, beginning with the period of the Warsaw uprising (August, 1944)."

According to a direction found in the possession of Okulicki, and intended for his assistants, "victory over Germany will threaten not only the interests of Britain in Europe, but will place all Europe in fear, Britain, taking into consideration her interests in Europe, will have to mobilise the Powers in Europe against the U.S.S.R. It is clear that we should be in the front row of this anti-Soviet bloc, and it is impossible to conceive this bloc, which will be controlled by Britain, without the participation of Germany."

Jankowsky, one of the chief accused, admitted that on his instructions the "Department of Internal Affairs of the Polish Command" had sent a direction to delegates in the western districts of White Russia and elsewhere to prevent the establishment of Soviet power by means of propaganda and agitation. "It was aimed at Soviet power, and not at the Red Army," he said. "I did not give instructions for resisting the Red Army."

Leading Accused

THE four leading accused are: Major-General Okulicki, former Commander of the Polish Home Army; Jan Jasukowsky, Adam Ben and Stanislav Jasukovich.

Jankowsky, member of the Christian Labour Party, was Deputy Prime Minister in the London Government and the London Government's delegate in Poland.

Jasukovich said: "We were all appointed Ministers with covernames. This was done by the London Emigré Government, which sent us these names by radio."

Three of four principal defendants accepted moral and political responsibility for misinforming the Polish Government in London on activities of the Soviet troops in Poland. They admitted they sought to win British support against the Russians, but denied participating in murders or acts leading directly to the deaths of Red Army officers and soldiers. Those who took this position were Jankowsky, Ben and Jasukovich. Okulicki has not yet taken the stand.

Moscow radio stated that Okulicki had admitted that General Sosnkowski, then Polish C.-in-C., and also the London Polish Government, gave him instructions in 1944 for preserving the home army after the Red Army's entry.

Jankowsky admitted that after the Warsaw uprising the Polish Home Army surrendered guns and ammunition to the Germans, but refused to do the same thing for the Red Army when it liberated the capital. The admission was brought out by General Ulrich, President of the Court, who forced from him one admission after another, and also made him contradict himself several times.

The first witness for the prosecution, Vladislav Herman, from the Lvov district, former District Commander in the Polish Home Army, said he received instructions to put up only a sham fight against the Germans, and to retain his cadres "for later."

Herman told the Court: "In February this year, in my district, we were preparing a rising against the Red Army. We had about 300 rifles, 600 tommy-guns, 1,500 revolvers, and 100 machine-guns."

De Gaulle Tells Story of France's Dark Days

"WE had difficult days in 1918, and we came through—we shall yet come through," Mr. Churchill said to Marshal Petain one night at a dinner, near Paris, during the dark days of 1940, when the British Premier was endeavouring to persuade the French to fight on.

"In 1918 I gave 40 divisions, which saved the British Army; where are your 40 divisions to save us now?" Petain retorted.

General de Gaulle tells the inside story of those fateful days in the French paper, France Soir, as follows:—

"On June 10th, the day Italy declared war, Weygand visited the French Premier, Reynaud, without being summoned, and read a note urging the Government to capitulate. That night I left in a car with Reynaud for Orleans.

"General Weygand telephoned us the next morning to tell us that, without advising Reynaud, he had asked Mr. Churchill to come to his headquarters at Briare to explain to him the situation. Reynaud then wanted to retire Weygand. I advised he should replace him by General Huntziger—who later conducted the armistice talks—for want of someone better.

"Reynaud said, 'Let us go and see General Huntziger.' Then he told me to go alone.

"I went—meeting the divisions in retreat. I found Huntziger at his headquarters at Vitry, and I told him that the Government wanted to continue the fight from the French Empire. Was he ready to do it? Huntziger replied, 'Yes.'

"I returned to Briare, where Weygand was demonstrating to Mr. Churchill how dark the prospects were. After dinner with Churchill, Admiral Darlan, C.-in-C., French Navy, arrived with General Vuillemin, G.O.C., French Air Force.

TO ATTACK PORTS

"It had been decided to attack Italian ports that night.

"Darlan argued that the Italian Air Force would reply with an incendiary attack on the petrol dumps around Etang de Berre. Reynaud, against his will, cancelled the attack on the ports.

"I got out of Reynaud a written order to Weygand for the execution of measures already planned for the withdrawal to North Africa of two reserve classes in training—specialists from motorised divisions from Belgium, Alpine divisions, etc., comprising some 500,000 men. They would have been evacuated from all ports from Brest to Nice. But Weygand did not carry out the order.

"Vuillemin sent bomber aircraft to North Africa on the date arranged. They were later seized by the Armistice Commission.

"On June 13th, Mr. Churchill arrived at Tours, and M. Baudouin urged Mr. Churchill to capitulate.

TO FIGHT ON

"Next day we left for Bordeaux. I asked Reynaud on arrival: 'Will you continue the fight or not?' He replied: 'Yes.'

"I left for London immediately to obtain the shipping necessary for removal to North Africa. Mr. Eden and the Admiralty promised shipping, and the French Ambassador informed him of the British offer of the Act of Union."

When he returned to France after a talk with Mr. Churchill, General de Gaulle found that Reynaud had resigned and that Pétain was Premier.

"On June 17th," continued de Gaulle, "I again saw Mr. Churchill, and told him I was staying. He was ready for anything. At 1 p.m. we learned that Marshal Pétain had asked for an Armistice."

Commenting upon his decision to go to London and the appeal he made over the B.B.C. on June 18th, de Gaulle explained: "My conduct on June 18th was a continuation of the policy decided upon by the Reynaud Government, of which I was a member."

This interview, published for the first time, was given by de Gaulle while he was still in London and was corrected in his own hand, says Reuter.

Tremendous crowds roared themselves hoarse as 50,000 men of France's new army marched through the Boulevards yesterday, the fifth anniversary of General de Gaulle's "fight on" broadcast from London, following the collapse of France. Airmen patterned the sky with a great cross of Lorraine.

This day of celebration, says Reuter, was ushered in by the roar of a salvo of 1,000 guns.

U.S. Criticism of Mr. de Valera

Commenting on Mr. de Valera sympathising with the German Minister on the death of Hitler, Mr. Michael J. Quill, President of the Transport Workers' Union of America, writing in the Transport Bulletin, says:

"This certainly is the time for all men of good will to pray and sing 'God Save Ireland.'

"Not since Padraic Pearse and James Connolly were forced to surrender the Dublin Post Office at the conclusion of the 1916 Rebellion did the Irish people live through a darker day or suffer such great shame as they did on May 2nd, 1945. On that day, de Valera, without the authority of the Irish people, and accompanied by one of his Ministers, plodded his way to the Nazi Legation in Dublin and there publicly shed tears over the reported death of Adolf Hitler.

"This is not only a crime committed behind the backs of the great Irish people in the homeland, but it is also an insult to the sons and daughters and friends of Ireland all over the world, who have never ceased to take their rightful place amongst the forces fighting for decency, freedom and democracy. For de Valera to commit this crime now, of all times, is not just confusing. It is a vicious attempt to compel the Irish people to play the rôle of a tail to the bloody and sinking kite of the Hitler and Mussolini way of life . . .

"It was in order to mourn the loss of his idol, Hitler, that Ireland's de Valera went to the Nazi Embassy. . .

"It can no longer be argued that de Valera did this in order to maintain any pretence of neutrality. There are many other countries that have remained neutral in this war, but their leaders did not try to stain the hands of their people with the blood that Hitler spilled so freely until Tuesday, May 2, as did de Valera."

Porter Transit and Price Talks

Discussions have taken place between the Licensed Grocers' and Vintners' Protection Association and Messrs. Arthur Guinness, Son and Co., Ltd., and between the Association and the Department of Supplies in connection with the decision of Córas Iompair Eireann to carry only goods which are carriage paid. A deputation from the Association met Messrs. Guinness to discuss the situation in the Dublin area, as well as in other areas where the price has been increased.

Found Not Guilty By Direction

Edward Brennan, Longford street, and John T. Carey, York street, in Dublin Circuit Criminal Court were yesterday found not guilty by direction of Judge Sheehy of the charge of being "found by night at 10 Crow street with a housebreaking implement — a screw-driver — contrary to Section 28 (2) of the Larceny Act, 1916."

Carey, who was also charged with assaulting Mrs. Florence McCarthy, Athol street, Belfast, whose brother resides at 10 Crow street, was found guilty and put back for sentence.

JOYCE IN COURT

Charge of High Treason

WILLIAM JOYCE ("Lord Haw Haw") made an eight minutes appearance in the dock at Bow street, London, yesterday, to face a charge of high treason. He was described as 39 years of age, of no occupation and of no fixed abode.

Joyce stood to attention and squared his shoulders in a hushed and crowded court.

Only evidence of arrest was given, and Joyce was remanded until next Monday, when the Court will be ready to sit from day to day.

Mr. H. A. K. Morgan, for the Director of Public Prosecutions, said that Joyce was charged with high treason in that between September 2nd, 1939, and May 29th, 1945, being a person owing allegiance to His Majesty the King, he adhered to the King's enemies elsewhere than in the King's Realm, to wit, the German Realm, contrary to the Treason Act, 1351."

After Chief Inspector Frank Bridges, of the Special Branch, had given evidence of arresting Joyce on his arrival in England by air on Saturday afternoon, Mr. Morgan asked for a remand until next Monday.

The Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Sir Bertrand Watson: "I assume that you cannot bring forward the evidence before that date."

Mr. Morgan—"No, sir. Two, and possibly three, witnesses will have to come from abroad."

Sir Bertrand thereupon said that Monday would be convenient. The prosecution was anxious that the case, if the Court should be of the opinion that there was a sufficient case to go to the Central Criminal Court, should be in time for the July session.

Turning to Joyce, Sir Bertrand asked if he had any objection to that course, and Joyce replied: "I have no objection, but I should like to apply for legal assistance."

In reply to Sir Bertrand, Mr. Morgan said: "The position is a little complicated. There is a certain amount of foreign currency in the possession of the military authorities, but my information is that most of it belongs to the defendant's wife. In any event, I doubt if it would be enough to pay for him to be properly legally represented."

The magistrate then told Joyce that he would be remanded until June 25th, and a certificate of legal aid would be granted to him.

Joyce—"Thank you."

Sir Bertrand explained that Joyce was being given a full week to instruct his solicitor and counsel, and Joyce replied: "I quite understand that."

Joyce had given his answers in a firm voice, and when the adjournment was announced he bowed to the magistrate, turned sharply to his right, squared his shoulders again and left the dock, where the policeman, with an arm around him, guided him through the crowd to the door to the cells.

Joyce was taken to Brixton Jail in a police van just over three hours after making his brief court appearance.

Gandhi Warns Wavell

In a telegram to Lord Wavell yesterday, Gandhi requested an alteration of the date of the Simla Conference, convened for next Monday, and for clarification of the caste Hindu issue he has raised. The Viceroy replied that he does not think such delay is desirable.

In another telegram Gandhi said: "If the fixing of parity between caste Hindus and Moslems is not changeable, a religious division will become officially stereotyped on the eve of independence. Personally, I can never subscribe to it nor will Congress if I know its mind, and you will quite unconsciously, but equally surely, defeat the purpose of the conference if the parity between caste Hindus and Moslems is unalterable."

In his reply, the Viceroy said that Mr. Amery's statement in Parliament on June 14th, and his own broadcast, constituted the terms of reference of the conference. "None of the persons or parties concerned is expected or required to accept or reject the proposals now," Lord Wavell said.

THE SEASON'S FIRST CUP RACE ANALYSED

By Our Special Correspondent

FOR some years now the majority of the leading English classic horses have been retired to the stud at the end of their three-year-old careers. That is a regrettable, but wholly understandable, practice. Fortunately, however, this year is an exception to the rule. Of the first dozen in Mr. Fawcett's three-year-old Free Handicap only three—Happy Landing and the fillies Garden Path and Fair Fame—are no longer in training. The Aga Khan's St. Leger winner, Tehran; Lord Derby's Borealis; Lord Rosebery's Ocean Swell, who won the Derby; Mr. William Woodward's Oaks and Champion Stakes winner, Hycilla; and Sir Hugo Cunliffe Owen's pair, Abbot's Fell and ill-fated Rockefella, remain. Each of these four-year-olds were in the very top class last year, and not one of them gave us any conclusive reason to doubt their stamina. Therefore, the cup races this year have become far more interesting than they have been for a long time. The first of them—the Coronation Cup—takes place at Newmarket on Thursday.

Nine of the original twenty-two entries have accepted, and among them are Tehran, Ocean Swell, Borealis, Abbot's Fell, and Hycilla. One of these will win, but I do not think it will be Abbot's Fell. He is a high-class colt, and finished fifth in the Derby last year, right on top of the placed horses, and won the St. Leger Trial Stakes. Though both his dam, Lady Abbess, and his full sister, Sweet Abbess, were sprinters, he himself has inherited a full measure of stamina, presumably from his sire, Felstead. A powerfully built roan colt, he has never struck me as likely to beat Ocean Swell or Tehran, for I think he is a little, if not very much, outclassed by them.

MIGHT HAVE WON DERBY

I have always had a great liking for Borealis. It was a pity that he was not entered in the Derby, for, judging by his form in the spring—and, indeed, in the autumn—he might well have beaten Ocean Swell. In the Leger, Tehran had improved sufficiently to finish one and a half lengths in front of him, with Ocean Swell, a length away, third. Subsequently, he ran poorly in the Champion Stakes; but, then, he was feeling the effect of two very strenuous efforts against Tehran. This year, first time out, Borealis was swamped by Ocean Swell in a two-horse race, just as he did last year in the St. Leger. He has grit and determination, speed and stamina.

HYCILLA THE DANGER

I have an inkling that the main danger to Tehran will come from the beautiful chestnut filly, Hycilla. She was running for the first time this year when she finished third to Borealis and Ocean Swell, and I am sure that that race will have brought her on considerably. Her trainer, Captain Boyd-Rochfort, is patient and persevering. He will never hurry one of his charges if he thinks it will ultimately do it harm. Consequently, Hycilla had only one race before winning the Oaks last year. Then she was backed confidently to win the St. Leger, and this she failed dismally to do. Full of running three furlongs from home, she clapped up all of a sudden. Many wrote her off immediately as a non-stayer, but ten days later she regained her reputation by winning the Champion Stakes. Now, in my opinion, she will have no difficulty in staying 1½ miles.

It is pleasing to reflect that both Hycilla and Tehran were bred in Ireland—the colt at the Sheshoon Stud in Co. Kildare and the filly at the Middleton Park Stud in Westmeath.

It remains to eliminate the four other runners. Cadet is a very useful handicapper, but he has few pretensions to being anything else. Very likely, he would win his race at Windsor on Saturday, but I read that he travels to Newmarket. Hunsingore is a fast horse, and also a very difficult horse to ride. I am not convinced that he appreciates a truly-run race over 1½ miles, and it would be a truly-run race, for, obviously, Darbhanga has been left in to ensure that Tehran gets full opportunity to utilise his staying power.

Copernicus is a vastly improved four-year-old. He is well bred, too Still, because a horse wins a mediocre handicap at Salisbury very easily, one cannot, therefore, suppose that he will win the Coronation Cup.

To sum up: I think Tehran will win, and I think Ocean Swell, Hycilla and Borealis, in that order, will follow him home. It will, most probably, prove a very exciting race. Perhaps before the end of the season, these four will meet the great staying five-year-old, Persian Gulf, now back in slow, steady work, and the brilliant, but ill-fated, Rockefella. If Dante were not among this year's three-year-olds, these cup races might well overshadow the classics. They, in their own way, are classics of a high order. At the moment, though, it is impossible to overshadow Dante. There are too many Yorkshiremen in the world.

PROBABLE STARTERS

FOLLOWING are the probable starters for the Coronation Cup, with weights and jockeys:—

Abbots Fell, 9-0 (A. Wragg); Borealis, 9-0 (H. Wragg); Hunsingore, 9-0 (M. Beary); Tehran, 9-0 (G. Richards); Cadet, 9-0 (S. Wragg); Ocean Swell, 9-0 (E. Smith); Hycilla, 8-11 (D. Smith); Copernicus, 8-4 (C. Richards); Darbhanga, 7-11 (——).

Six weeks later, however, he again met Ocean Swell, and this time, in receipt of 3lb., beat him by a head. He will still, therefore, have to improve so to beat Ocean Swell on Thursday.

Borealis, when he goes to stud, will almost certainly prove a worthy male-line descendant of Teddy. He has speed and abundant stamina; yet I am not at all sure that he will beat Ocean Swell at level weights this year. I am not sure that he has improved as much as Lord Rosebery's colt. Incidentally, when Brumeux sired Borealis, his stud fee was 9 gns.

In between his two races with Borealis this year, Ocean Swell came up against Tehran, and was beaten in a dour struggle by a neck. It must also be remembered that Tehran's only previous race was against his stablemate, the maiden three-year-old, Isfahan. That was merely an exercise gallop for Tehran, but impressed by Ocean Swell's running this year He has, if this form be taken exactly, made more improvement than either Tehran or Borealis. Let me illustrate this by handicapping the three of them strictly on their form this year, and by showing alongside, for comparison, Mr. Fawcett's estimate of them last year:—

	Form.	Free H'cap.
Tehran	9 7	9 7
Ocean Swell	9 6	9 1
Borealis	9 4	9 2

Still, I do not think Ocean Swell will beat Tehran on Thursday. An unknown quantity at the beginning of last year, the Aga Khan's colt did not reach his peak until after the Derby. Since then he is unbeaten in five races. He is not the sort to ever himself unnecessarily and, therefore, he will never win by a very wide margin. Ocean Swell and Borealis are certain to extend him; but I cannot see why he should not beat them,

TRANSPORT WANT TO ENTER TOP CLASS

An application from the Transport Club for a place in the Football League of Ireland is among those coming up for consideration at tomorrow night's meeting of the Management Committee. The Transport Club has the backing of Cornelscourts Eireann, and the firm, which is, of course, one of the biggest in the country, has secured the Carlisle ground in Bray. Attendances have been large for Transport's matches in Division II of the Leinster Senior League. The majority of the players will be drawn from the firm, but the team will be strengthened considerably if the club secures a place in the League of Ireland.

DEFENCE MINISTER WINS MILITARY PENSIONS APPEAL

THE first of eighteen appeals under the Military Service Pensions (Amendment) Act of this year was heard before the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Murnaghan, Mr. Justice Geoghegan, Mr. Justice O'Byrne and Mr. Justice Black, in the Supreme Court yesterday, and allowed. The appeal was on behalf of the Minister for Defence from an order of the High Court of March 26th last, making absolute a conditional order of certiorari directing the Minister to send to the High Court, for the purpose of being quashed, the report of the Referee appointed under the Military Service Pensions Act, 1934, that Cornelius O'Shea, farmer, Lisswane East, Milltown, Co. Kerry, was not a person to whom the Act applied.

Mr. R. McGonigal, S.C., with whom were Mr. Carroll O'Daly, S.C., and Mr. A. O'Keeffe (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor), for the Minister, said that this appeal was based on the provisions of the amending Act, which amended in certain respects the Act of 1934. In an appeal in an application of James McCarthy (Walsh's avenue, Blackrock, Cork) the Supreme Court had decided that the procedure in that case had not been in accordance with the jurisdiction conferred on the Referee by the Act of 1934, the Advisory Committee set up by the Act not having sat with the Referee, and the evidence not having been taken in the presence of the Referee.

The procedure adopted in the present application had, broadly speaking, said Mr. McGonigal, been similar to the proceedings in McCarthy's application. As a result of the Supreme Court decision in McCarthy's case, 60 or 70 conditional Orders had been made absolute, and the applications had been sent back for re-hearing.

All those applications had, he thought, been heard, or were in the process of being heard, and at the beginning of last January an announcement was made that any proceedings not instituted before a certain date would not be given the benefit of the judgment in the McCarthy appeal. The 18 appeals with which the Court were now dealing had been instituted within that time, and the warning had not been accepted. This application before the High Court had been dealt with on the one main ground that the Advisory Committee and the Referee had not sat together.

The provision in the 1934 Act, that the Committee should sit with the Referee to assist him, had been substantially amended in the amending Act, which provided that there should be a Committee to assist the Referee if requested to do so.

The procedure followed in the present application, as shown by the affidavit of Mr. O'Shea and the affidavit of Mr. Frank Ryan, Secretary to the Referee, had been clearly justified by the Act as amended, submitted Mr. McGonigal.

Mr. Sean MacBride, S.C., with whom were Mr. J. A. Costello, S.C., and Mr. T. J. Conolly (instructed by Mr. John M. O'Shea), for Mr. O'Shea, submitted that the Court was being asked, in effect, to make an Order which would amount to a nullity, because the Referee's report had been quashed and no longer existed.

The Chief Justice, with whose judgment all the other members of the Court agreed, said that it seemed to him that the amending Act did indicate the clearest intention that, where a conditional Order had been made absolute before February 1st, 1945, the law applicable was the law as it stood under the Act of 1934; and, if this Order had been made absolute subsequent to that date, the law applicable was the law as enacted by the Act of 1945. He thought, therefore, that the appeal should be allowed.

Mr. McGonigal, applying for costs, said that Mr. O'Shea had been aware of the warning issued, and still did not bring his application until February 26th.

The Chief Justice said that the Court would allow the question of costs to remain until they had heard the other appeals.

DUBLIN WOMAN'S ALIMONY MOTION

Mr. Justice Overend, in the High Court yesterday, adjourned generally with liberty to re-enter, a motion brought on behalf of Mrs. Florence Mary Campbell, Coolcorran, Kimmage road, East, Terenure, Dublin, for alimony at the rate of £5 per week pending the hearing of her petition for a divorce from her husband, William Albert Edward Campbell, Secretary of the Dublin Stock Exchange, on the ground of alleged cruelty, which Mr. Campbell denied.

Mr. Justice Overend made the order on an undertaking given on behalf of the husband, who, it was stated, also resided at Coolcorran, to continue paying all the household expenses and £5 per month to the wife in respect of her petty personal expenses.

He reserved the question of costs.

ROBB v. KEMP IN TENNIS FINAL

AFTER a hard match against K. Kerr in the semi-final of the men's singles in the Fitzwilliam Club tournament yesterday, S. C. Robb qualified for the final, in which he will meet C. A. Kemp. The match, in which both players favoured the use of spin shots, went to three sets, and, though Kerr took the second easily after losing the first, his resistance cracked in the decider.

DEFENCE MINISTER WINS MILITARY PENSIONS APPEAL

THE first of eighteen appeals under the Military Service Pensions (Amendment) Act of this year was heard before the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Murnaghan, Mr. Justice Geoghegan, Mr. Justice O'Byrne and Mr. Justice Black, in the Supreme Court yesterday, and allowed. The appeal was on behalf of the Minister for Defence from an order of the High Court of March 26th last, making absolute a conditional order of certiorari directing the Minister to send to the High Court, for the purpose of being quashed, the report of the Referee appointed under the Military Service Pensions Act, 1934, that Cornelius O'Shea, farmer, Lisswane East, Milltown, Co. Kerry, was not a person to whom the Act applied.

Mr. R. McGonigal, S.C., with whom were Mr. Carroll O'Daly, S.C., and Mr. A. O'Keeffe (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor), for the Minister, said that this appeal was based on the provisions of the amending Act, which amended in certain respects the Act of 1934. In an appeal in an application of James McCarthy (Walsh's avenue, Blackrock, Cork) the Supreme Court had decided that the procedure in that case had not been in accordance with the jurisdiction conferred on the Referee by the Act of 1934, the Advisory Committee set up by the Act not having sat with the Referee, and the evidence not having been taken in the presence of the Referee.

As a result of the Supreme Court decision in McCarthy's case, 60 or 70 conditional Orders had been made absolute, and the applications had been sent back for re-hearing.

All those applications had, he thought, been heard, or were in the process of being heard, and at the beginning of last January an announcement was made that any proceedings not instituted before a certain date would not be given the benefit of the judgment in the McCarthy appeal. The 18 appeals with which the Court were now dealing had been instituted within that time, and the warning had not been accepted. The provision in the 1934 Act, that the Committee should sit with the Referee to assist him, had been substantially amended in the amending Act, which provided that there should be a Committee to assist the Referee if requested to do so.

The procedure followed in the present application, as shown by the affidavit of Mr. O'Shea and the affidavit of Mr. Frank Ryan, Secretary to the Referee, had been clearly justified by the Act as amended, submitted Mr. McGonigal.

Mr. Sean MacBride, S.C., with whom were Mr. J. A. Costello, S.C., and Mr. T. J. Conolly (instructed by Mr. John M. O'Shea), for Mr. O'Shea, submitted that the Court was being asked, in effect, to make an Order which would amount to a nullity, because the Referee's report had been quashed and no longer existed.

He thought, therefore, that the appeal should be allowed.

Mr. McGonigal, applying for costs, said that Mr. O'Shea had been aware of the warning issued, and still did not bring his application until February 26th.

The Chief Justice said that the Court would allow the question of costs to remain until they had heard the other appeals.

Reparations Problem

Sir Walter Monckton, leader of the British delegation to the Allied Reparations Commission in Moscow, together with other British delegates, arrived in Moscow last night.

Mr. Edwin Pauley and M. Maisky are the American and Soviet representatives on the Commission.

Sir Walter Monckton travelled by air from Northolt with a staff of Foreign Office, legal, economic, and statistical experts. Their job, in collaboration with the United States and Soviet representatives, is to ensure that Germany pays for the damage inflicted on Europe and to ensure that her war potentialities are destroyed for good.

The Commission will concentrate upon evolving a realistic plan avoiding the mistakes made after the last war, when the imposition of huge monetary reparations contributed to the creation of the economic crisis which overtook Europe in the early thirties. This time the Allies aim at quicker decisions and results.

THE NEW PRESIDENT

The Presidential election is over. Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly has been chosen as the second President of Eire, and the first to be elected by a free vote of the people; but we have an idea that the final figures cannot have aroused much enthusiasm among the inner circles of the Fianna Fail Party. The constituency was the whole 26-county area — the only constituency that could not be gerrymandered in any way. From the outset, Fianna Fail made the contest a matter of confidence in the Government. Mr. O'Kelly did not address a single meeting; but all the Ministers, headed by Mr. de Valera, stumped the country warning the people of the terrible things that would be likely to happen in the event of their candidate's defeat. Let us say at once that, personally, we welcome the new President. He has been elected to the highest office in the State, and we wish him health and strength to carry out his duties during the next seven years. We do not congratulate Fianna Fail. We are convinced that the party acted wrongly in its insistence that the election should be fought on the narrowest party lines. It mobilised the whole formidable machinery of its organisation on Mr. O'Kelly's behalf, and, apparently, spent money lavishly. Huge portraits of the former Tanaiste decorated every railway station. Tram cars and buses in the city of Dublin were pressed into service to further the candidature of Fianna Fail's nominee. In these circumstances, Fine Gael also entered the lists. Its resources, in respect of organisation and of funds, could not compare with those of the Government party; but it made a reasonably brave show. Dr. McCartan, whose candidature was intended as a protest against a purely party fight, was forced to depend entirely on his personal resources. He had no organisation behind him, and no party funds from which to draw. In the event, the election figures were remarkable. Most people expected that Mr. O'Kelly would have secured an easy victory; actually he did nothing of the sort. Just over a million votes were cast, and the first preferences showed that Fianna Fail was in a minority. We do not pretend to know how the issue would have been affected if the votes of the two or three hundred thousand Irishmen, who are serving in the British forces or working across the water, had been included. The fact is, however, that, whatever may be argued to the contrary, the Presidential plebiscite—for that is what it was—did not give Mr. de Valera the vote of confidence for which he made such powerful pleas at the hustings. Mr. O'Kelly was elected on the second count. A feature of the voting was the fact that more than 67,000 votes were non-transferable—a figure which indicated that there was an exceptional amount of "plumping." If there had not been a deal of cross-voting, Mr. O'Kelly assuredly would have been beaten. He obtained more than 27,000 of Dr. McCartan's second preference votes, as against over 117,000 which went to General MacEoin. The most encouraging feature of the whole business was the fact that 212,834 citizens of Eire gave their first preferences to the Independent candidate. This fact, while it may cause much fluttering in the party dovecotes, gives men and women of good-will fresh hope for the future.

The stars in their courses fought against Sisera. Throughout his career they seem to have been unusually propitious to Eamon de Valera. The Taoiseach must be one of the luckiest politicians of all time; and he never has failed to take the fullest advantage of the opportunities which fortune or accident may have given him. He is the only Irish leader who ever got a second chance. No man could have been more thoroughly discredited than he was during the period of the Civil War; yet he staged a triumphant "come-back," and there is no doubt that, although his party has not a majority in the country, he finds himself in a strong position to-day. In his capacity as a party leader, Mr. de Valera must have rejoiced recently when Mr. Winston Churchill attacked him in his victory broadcast. It may not be too much to say that, but for the British Prime Minister's outburst, Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly might not have been preparing to take up his residence in the Phœnix Park next week. Mr. Churchill played into the Taoiseach's hands. All through the election campaign Mr. de Valera and his lieutenants continued to declare that the outside world would interpret the result of the polling as a vote of confidence, or of no confidence, in the Government's external policy. Years ago widespread hilarity was caused when the Skibbereen Eagle announced with all solemnity that it had its eye on the Tsar of Russia. This time Mr. de Valera and his Ministers reversed the process, warning the electorate that the Tsar of Russia —or rather his doughty successor, Marshal "Soso" Stalin—had his eye on the Skibbereen Eagle. The truth is, of course, that the outside world has not been taking the slightest interest in our Presidential election. It did not care two straws whether Mr. O'Kelly won or was defeated; but it was good propaganda on the part of Fianna Fail to play the part of the Fat Boy in "Pickwick" and make the people's flesh creep. It has been a Pyrrhic victory for Fianna Fail. In spite of all the panoply of the party's highly-efficient organisation; in spite of the Taoiseach's processional march to the Dublin General Post Office, in company with the veterans of 1916 (which, incidentally, was most excellent theatre), Fianna Fail failed to secure that overall majority upon which its spokesmen apparently set such high store. We feel that Dr. McCartan, whose chances of success from the very beginning were slight, has done a national service by his courageous candidature, which, of course, has been financed out of his own pocket. He has proved that there still is a hard core of intelligent opinion in this country which is prepared to turn a deaf ear to the platform bellowings of the politicians, and to see in the office of President a post that ought to be filled by somebody who has no kind of party ties. As we have said repeatedly, we hold Mr. O'Kelly in high personal esteem. We believe that he will grace his high office, and that he will fulfil his Presidential duties with dignity as well as with absolute correctness. He deserves, and we are convinced that he will be assured of, the loyal support of every decent citizen. Our complaint is not against him, but against the Fianna Fail Party, which chose the Presidential election as an occasion on which to display its strength. Inasmuch as it failed to obtain a majority of the popular votes, we are glad that it has been discomfited. Seven years hence, we hope, the office of President will not be dragged into the political gutter.

S.O.S.

Recent information on the subject of the Dublin Bay rescue services is, to say the least of it, disquieting. Without going into the merits of any other cases, one can judge, from the recent accident in which two yachtsmen were drowned, that an alarming lack of co-ordination exists between the various elements of the rescue service. The mere fact that two hours elaped between the time when the capsized dinghy was sighted from the Poolbeg lighthouse and the time when a lifeboat put out indicates sufficiently that improvement is needed. The City Coroner's hope, however, that the case would lead to a general inquiry into the state of the sea rescue services, appears to be vain. So far, the Department of Industry and Commerce has given no hint that it proposes to take any action. We do not suggest that there is anything lacking in the courage and efficiency of Irish lifeboat crews; they have given inspiring proof of both qualities many times. They can help the sailor in distress very little, however, until they know about his plight. In the case mentioned, the Poolbeg lighthouse observed the dinghy to be capsized at a time when, perhaps, there still was time to save both lives; but its wireless messages were not received, and, for some unfathomable reason, there was no land telephone by which a message might be sent. It is not improbable that the lack of that telephone was directly responsible for two deaths. To repair this one defect in the system is easy, though the existence of the defect cannot be excused; but we believe that the general feeling of uneasiness requires a stronger sedative. A few days ago the coast-watching service, which has kept a vigil from headlands all around the coast since 1939, was disbanded. The huts remain, equipped with telephones; many of the trained men still might be available for recruitment into a regular coast-watching service under the civil authority. That such a service would be welcomed heartily by all mariners and yachtsmen is beyond doubt. Ireland ought to have eyes all round its coast, if the lives of those who go down to the sea are to be safeguarded.

Cruiskeen Lawn

By Myles na gCopaleen

NO ma'am, pardon me, no man in the British Aisles has, I think I may say without bow-string, done more, striven harder or made more desperate sacrifices for the sake of promoting mutual overstanding between Irel& and Engl& than "my" self. I have never been to Westminster that I haven't made some little contact, some little Celtic speech, told some apposite little tale—all with a view to clearing up difficulties, establishing good will, smoothing away the clouds; in Dublin my visits, as infrequent as they are rare, have all been designed to allow of fullest and frankest discussions with your Executive Council, with intellectual leaders, bishops, censors and prominent men of all sex, and, invariably my message has been; do try to forget the Pats, I mean the Past; contemplate the mystery of the propinquity of our two islands, reflect but a moment on the community of our interests, think of the many ties of loyalty and affection which bind us to the Rev. Mother Country.

But now . . . . now . . . . I wonder. Something has happened. Just quite what I have not yet been able to determine. But something has come to shake my feet, sorry my faith, something has come to shake my simple view of the nature of our inter-relations. It happened—was it one, two, three weeks ago? You probably saw it yourselves but said nothing, knowing I would speak. A note to the effect that the Board of Works, Capitation Section, had taken in hand the rehabilitation of a certain statue on the estate of Lt. Col. Phœnix (Retd.). The full report I do not now propose to quote, contenting myself (if this indeed be contentment) with a restatement of the last sentence therein—

"The sword which was removed from Viscount Gough's hand on Christmas Eve, has not yet been recovered."

A moment, please: I have not done. On the (self) same day there also appeared in the papers an account of a ceremony which took place when the distinguished Colonial officer, General Eisenhower, recently received the Freedom of the City of London. A coincidence you will say? Perhaps . . . But did you read the full account? Hmmm? This bit here?:

"As the Sword of Honour which is eventually to be presented to General Eisenhower was not completed in time, the sword of the Duke of Wellington was used as a temporary token, and was handed to him by the Lord Mayor . . . .

Well . . . . what do you think of that? Quite clear, of course, what happened. It is, let me say it at once, it is deplorable. Viscount Gough was, with all his faults, an Irishman. The present writer fought by his hide and nose what he is talking about. It is deplorable that the British Government (so called) should allow itself to be blinded by petty spite as to disarm, in the confusion of the festive season, a gallant and courageous officer who never flinched from danger and whose hand and purse were ever at the disposal of the Irish people. It is worse than deplorable, it is unmanly that this Government, bound to us here in Dublin by many pledges of mutual love and confidence, should so violate its vows, so dishonour its fair name, so blacken the spotless purity of its reputation by an act of villainy which might well repel the hardest criminal in the dock. Lord Gough's sword must and shall be restored to him.

I name no names, I accuse no individual. I do not wish to stir up trouble, dissension, strife or civil commotion. General Eisenhower is too . . . . big, too . . . . fine a man to triumph thus vicariously over the genial Irish rebel chief, whose love of the United States and its robust Constitution informed all his waking hours. To him, on behalf of my friend, my old companion-in- (but now, alas without) -arms, my old, may I say it, segocia . . . . I appeal . . . . for Gough's sake give us back th' oul' sword. It will be a service that Ireland will remember. Come, Ike—be a pal!

AMBULANCE BRIGADE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES

SIR,—The announcement in the Irish Times on Wednesday that the decision of the St. John Ambulance Brigade to separate from England was unanimously approved of by the meeting of officers held at the Brigade Hall on June 12th, and the statement published on June 14th, that "although there has been no vote from the rank and file on the subject there is no feeling of dissatisfaction, and there have been no resignations as a result of the decisions," are, I believe, untrue.

I know that a very large number of officers of the Brigade are deeply grieved that the happy relations existing between the Brigade in Eire and the parent body at St. John's Gate have been terminated. As for the rank and file I cannot speak. They have not been given an opportunity of expressing their opinion.

With regard to resignations from the Brigade, the rank and file were not aware of the decision until Wednesday, and it is rather premature to announce on the following morning that there were none. I do not think there will be, and I sincerely hope not.

For many years the Brigade in Eire has managed its own affairs without any interference from the parent body. Members of the Brigade who have visited the historic old
